What Are RECIPES?

How do they work? Why do they work? What do they do?

Our Research

“What are recipes? How do they work? Why do they work? And what do they do?”

These questions drive the RELISH project. We will generate a better understanding of the link between recipes and culture, and why they should be understood as part of Europe’s cultural heritage.

Across eight workpackages, we will produce several digital and cultural tools to understand the impact recipes have in our lives and on heritage.

RELISH will reframe collective understandings of food culture and its importance in education, integrate a legal framework regarding recipes as intellectual property, develop future scenarios for EU culinary heritage, and design a culinary map to visualise current EU foodways.

Call:

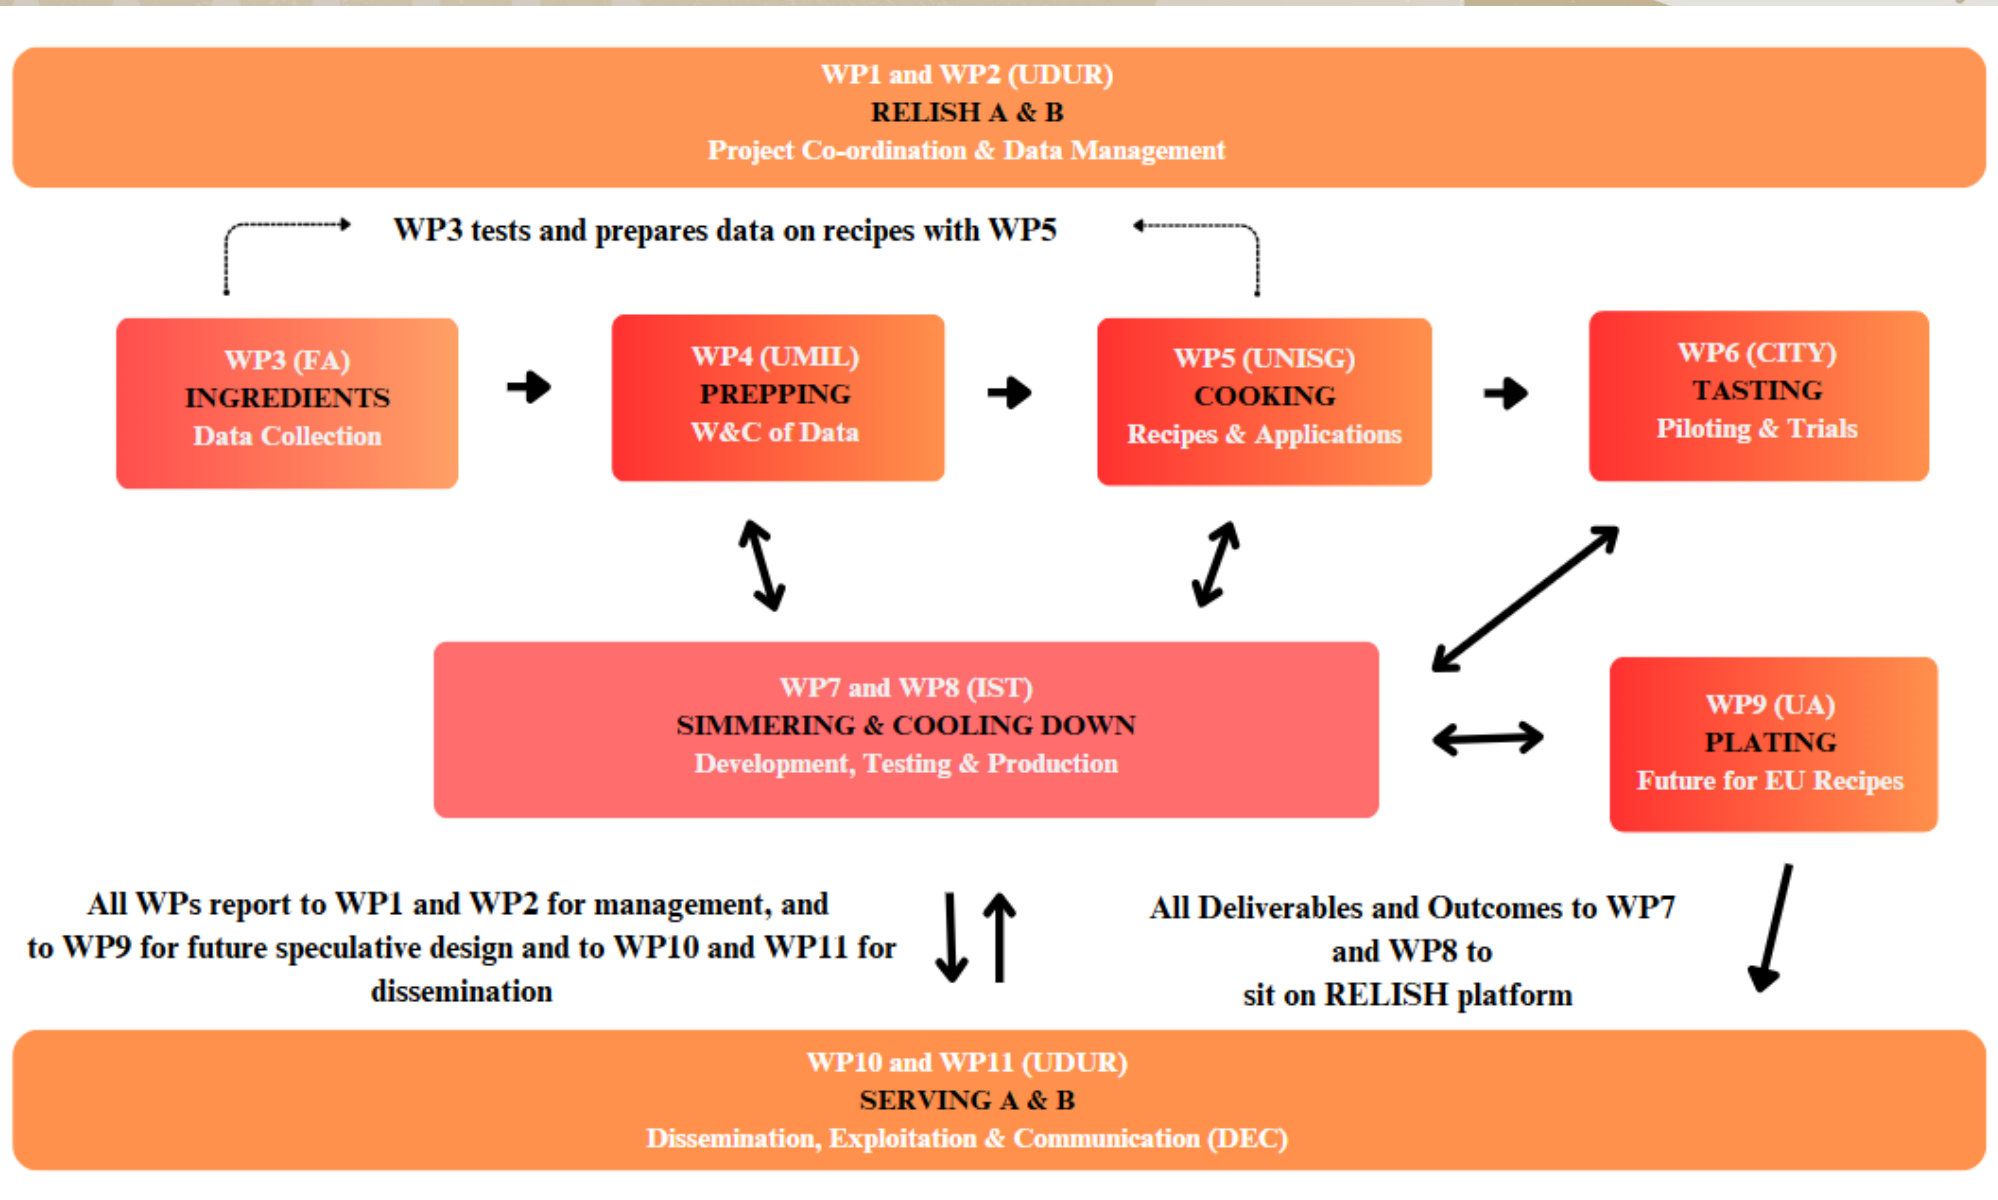

Europe's cultural heritage and arts – promoting our values at home and abroad
HORIZON-CL2-2024-HERITAGE-01-04

Topic destination:

Innovative research on the European cultural heritage and the cultural and creative industries (2023/24)

European R&I activities under this destination will support and strengthen European cultural heritage and cultural and creative industries essentially under three areas:

- Green: Sostenibilidad social y ambiental
- Digital: Digitalización y nuevas oportunidades formativas
- Innovative: Ecosistemas atractivos y llamativos

EXPECTED RESULTS

- Intellectual property for recipes for the culinary sector,
- Future scenarios for EU culinary cultural heritage,
- Culinary map to visualise current EU foodways and tracks young people's food practices,
- Digital tool to visualise EU recipes,
- Guidelines for public institutions connected with food culture to foster ethical and political principles,

The project targets emerging adults (18-25 yrs olds), food industry professional, educators and researchers, cultural heritage managers, creative industries, food activists, community and environmental organisers, social entrepreneurs (service, tourism and agrobusiness), policy and law makers, and AI and digital developers
